DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(e) the invention was described in-

(1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effect under this subsection of a national application published under section 122(b) only if the international application designating the United States was published under Article 21(2)(a) of such treaty in the English language; or

(2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that a patent shall not be deemed filed in the United States for the purposes of this subsection based on the filing of an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a).

2. Claims 1, 3-6, 8, 11-12, 14-17, 19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Bhatia (US Pat. 5,898,569).

Regarding claims 1, 3-6, 8, 11-12, 14-17, 19 Bhatia discloses an electronic apparatus comprising an apparatus body 105, and an electric part 190 detachably attached to the apparatus body 105, wherein the electric part 190 is attached to an outer wall of the apparatus body 105 , and the electric part 190 is provided with terminals (155a, 155b, 155c) for accomplishing electric connection of the electric part 190 with the apparatus body 105 and a heat radiating structure 177 for radiating heat generated in the apparatus body 105 (via 150). The electronic apparatus includes a heat radiating member 220, and the heat radiating member 220 of the electric part is connected to the heat radiating member 120 of the electronic apparatus when the electric part is attached

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 2, 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bhatia (US Pat. 5,898,569) as applied to claims 2, 13 above, and further in view of Yoshiaki et al. (JP 7-245849).

Regarding claims 2, 13, Bhatia discloses all the subject matter of the claimed inventions except for the heat radiating structure comprises a heat radiating member for radiating heat generated in the apparatus body via the electric part and that the heat radiating structure is a protruding and recessing wall structure allowing a passage of air between an outer surface of the electric part and an outer surface of the apparatus body. However, Yoshiaki et al taught a technique for allowing air to pass through an undulating structure provided between both faces of radiating parts keep in contact with each other. Therefore, it would be obvious to one of ordinary skill to modify a heat radiating member for radiating heat generated in the apparatus body via the electric part and that the heat radiating structure is a protruding and recessing wall structure allowing a passage of air between an outer surface of the electric part and an outer surface of the apparatus body of Bhatia into Gongsu's radiating member as applicant's invention in order to provide efficiently radiated within electronic part.

5. Claims 7, 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bhatia (US Pat. 5,898,569) as applied to claims 7, 18 above, and further in view of Akira et al. (JP 10-116133).

Regarding claims 7, 18, Bhatia discloses all the subject matter of the claimed inventions except for the electric part comprises a battery pack. However, Akira et al taught a technique for interchangeable mounting and dismounting a connector box and a battery pack on a lateral face at the rear of notebook computer. Therefore, it would be obvious to one of ordinary skill to include the electric part with a battery pack of Akira et al into Bhatia's electric part as applicant's invention in order to provide independent power within electronic part.

Response to Amendment

6. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-19 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

None.
